Health insurance can provide coverage for many of the costs associated with treating a critical illness like cancer or heart attack. But what about the other out-of-pocket costs that you incur when you or a loved one is battling a major illness and is unable to work? There's lost income—even if you have disability coverage, which only pays a portion of your regular earnings—along with co-pays, deductibles, family and living expenses, and even transportation costs to and from treatment. Many of these additional costs can contribute to the pressure you are already under at the worst possible time. Critical Illness Insurance can help to cover some of those gaps in your financial plan that you may not have even known existed.

“But I already have health insurance.”

Despite ongoing medical enhancements, incidence of critical illness in the US is seemingly high. Technology has dramatically improved the chances of survival for patients suffering a critical illness. However, with the possibility of surviving multiple Critical Illnesses or several incidents of the same illness in your lifetime, your financial plan for the future may be disrupted. With Critical Illness Insurance, the lump sum benefit you receive at the diagnosis of a critical illness can help offset those expenses not covered or not entirely covered by other sources of income or insurance.

“This is just another insurance that I will have and never use.”

While you hope you'll never need it, the statistics say there's a good chance you or a loved one will need to fight a critical illness in your lifetime. You can purchase coverage for yourself, your spouse and your child(ren). In the event one of your loved ones suffers from a critical illness, your spouse is eligible to receive the same level of benefits as you, and your dependent child may receive a percentage of your benefit coverage amount up to $12,500. Three categories of critical illnesses are covered: cancer, cardiovascular, and other. Each category has a 200% lifetime maximum.

“I have been diagnosed with a critical illness before and would not be approved for this coverage.”

This coverage may be medically underwritten. However, you, your spouse and child(ren) may be eligible to receive up to a predetermined amount of coverage without regard to medical evidence of insurability. We may also offer coverage for recurrent and subsequent incidences of critical illness. A recurrent incidence is one within the same category (ex. cardiovascular) and a subsequent incidence of critical illness is one in a different category (ex. cancer and cardiovascular). Your plan will include a pre-existing condition limitation, and you should understand that before buying this coverage.

“This is another bill I have to track.”

Your employer has made this coverage available to you at competitive group rates through convenient payroll deduction. It's the easiest way to secure valuable protection against the financial uncertainty that can accompany a critical illness.

“What do I do now?”

If you agree that you and your loved ones can benefit from this important coverage, it is easy to get started.
